Summary

I am Professor of Economics at the University of Vigo, Co-director of the FENOSA chair on energy and sustainable development, and Director of Economics for Energy, a private non-profit research center devoted to the economic analysis of energy issues in Spain. Between 2014 and 2017 I was the director of the Florence School of Regulation-Climate at the EUI (Florence), dealing with EU climate policies. I am a member of the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) for the elaboration of its Fifth and Sixth Assessment Reports (respectively released in April 2014 and forthcoming in July 2021). My teaching and research interests lay on the borderlines of Public, Energy and Environmental Economics. I have published around 30 academic papers in English, most of them in high-impact academic journals. I have also published and edited several books and book chapters, and my research has been repeatedly disseminated in international academic workshops and seminars. I have assiduously organized scientific events, also as a means to disseminate knowledge to interested parties in society. I have been project leader of around 30 research projects since 2000, mostly funded by public institutions and private firms. I have supervised four doctoral theses and seven postdocs, and have been quite active in academic reviewing of papers and peers too. I have usually received good teaching evaluations by students and have coordinated the master's degree on environmental management at the University of Vigo until 2014.
